India and Russia have ended efforts to agree on bilateral trade in the rupee, after months of negotiations failed to convince Moscow to accept the Indian currency, two Indian government officials and a source with direct knowledge of the negotiations said on Friday. It will be a blow to India's importers of cheap oil and coal from Russia, which had hoped to establish a permanent payment mechanism in rupees to reduce currency conversion costs. (05/05)

f) Sectoral insight from Croatia

Medical Devices Market in Croatia – Overview

Key View

Croatia's medical device market is showing signs of recovery. The market is expected to expand by a 2022-2027 CAGR of 5.3% in local currency terms and 6.3% in US dollar terms, which should see it grow to EUR 626.6mn (USD 689.3mn) by 2027. Fitch expects the market to register mostly mid-single-digit growth across the forecast period, remaining mostly reliant on imports due to the limited domestic manufacturing capacity. Given that growth and strong economic performance in 2022 was driven largely by a rebound in tourism, marking continued recovery from pandemic-related slumps in 2020 and 2021, Fitch expects this continuing trend to support medical device demand in the near term, as Croatia ratifies its reputation as a popular medical tourism destination. However, this effect is expected to moderate on account of a slowdown in 2023, as persistently elevated inflationary pressures pose headwinds which weaken consumer and business activities. Risks to Fitch's short-term outlook for Croatia are tilted to the downside, with uncertainty tied to the Russia-Ukraine conflict contributing to inflationary pressures while weighing on growth across Europe.

Medical Devices Annual Imports

Import performance for Croatia's medical devices market in local currency terms for the decade between 2010 and 2020 was characterised by a mixture of growth and contractions. Following high single-digit growth in 2011, the import market registered contractions in 2012, 2018 and 2019, whereas double-growth was registered in the three years between 2015 and 2017. Midsingle-digit growth was registered in 2014, with low-single-digit growth characterising medical device imports in 2013 and 2020, the end of the 10-year performance period, during which time medical devices imports grew by 3.0%. This growth was mainly propelled by the patient aids and other medical devices imports which expanded by double-digit and high-single-digit growth respectively. The total five-year CAGR for medical devices import was 7.9% in local currency terms for the period spanning 2015-2020.

Other medical devices was the largest product area as a percentage of total imports of medical devices, accounting for over 24%. The consumables product area also accounted for almost 24% of medical device imports, with syringes, needles & catheters, a subcategory of consumables, representing almost 13% of total imports. Patient aids represented almost 19% of total imports, followed by diagnostic imaging and dental products which represented about 14% and 10% of imports respectively. Orthopaedics & prosthetics were the smallest import category as a percentage of total imports, representing less than 9%. Of the medical device imports, other medical devices registered the largest CAGR in the 2015-2020 reference period, followed by patient aids, diagnostic imaging products, consumables, dental products and finally, orthopaedics & prosthetics.

Leading Suppliers

Germany was the leading supplier of medical imports in 2020, accounting for around 30% of the market. Germany was the leading supplier for diagnostic imaging and dental products, supplying around 40% of these products. It was also the leading supply market for orthopaedics & prosthetics as well as patient aids, accounting for about 20% of imports in each of these said categories. EU bloc member states were responsible for supplying almost 85% of imports in 2020, with leading suppliers including the Netherlands, Belgium, Slovenia and Italy, each of which had import shares of between 7-9%.

Medical Devices Annual Exports

Over the last decade spanning the 2010-2020 period, medical device annual exports in local currency terms have predominantly registered high single-digit growth in 2011, double-digit growth between 2013 and 2016, triple-digit growth in 2017 and double-digit growth in 2018 and 2020. The medical device export market registered low single-digit and double-digit growth contractions in 2012 and 2019 respectively, with the latter mostly underpinned by the re-exportation of mechano-therapy apparatus. In 2020, medical device exports increased by 19.8% in local currency terms. The 2015-2020 CAGR for medical device exports in local currency terms was 11.9%.

Among medical device product exports, patient aids was clearly the largest product area in 2020, accounting for almost 37% of total exports, with the majority of this quota contributed by therapeutic appliances. Consumables and other medical devices each represented export shares of about 17%, while dental products, orthopaedics & prosthetics and diagnostic imaging accounted for about 14%, 10% and 6% of total exports respectively. The best performing category of medical device exports in 2020 was patient aids, increasing by double-digits in both US dollar and local currency terms. The strongest subcategory of patient aids which registered the strongest growth in exports in 2020 was therapeutic appliances, with this trend underpinned by increased global demand for these products in the peri-pandemic era. The export of consumables also registered double-digit growth in US dollar and local currency terms in 2020. Orthopaedics & prosthetics and other medical devices product exports in 2020 were the only other product groups that registered positive growth, whereas diagnostic imaging and dental products exports experienced contractions in 2020, with the latter registering the largest declines in exports of 29.3% and 25.7% in US dollar and local currency terms respectively. Over the 2015-2020 period, consumables were the strongest performing medical device export category in both US dollar and local currency terms, registering double-digit CAGRs, followed by patient aids, other medical devices, dental products, diagnostic imaging products and finally, orthopaedics & prosthetics.

Leading Destinations

Bosnia was the leading export destination of Croatia medical devices in 2020, accounting for 15% of total exports. Slovenia and Germany were the second and third leading export destinations, representing 12.6% and 9.5% of total exports respectively. The EU accounted for just over 57% of exports in 2020.

Medical Devices National Manufacturers

Biognost

Biognost was founded in 1990 and claims to be the leading manufacturer of immunohaematological and immunochromatographic in vitro diagnostic products in the territory of former Yugoslavia. Biognost has over 2,000 products on the market including haematology, histopathology and immunohaematology products, immunochromatographic tests, laboratory equipment and transfusion equipment. 170 of these are Biognost's own products.

Instrumentaria

Instrumentaria was originally founded in 1896, as a company that manufactured surgical instruments. The company employs around 50 members of staff. The company manufactures around 2,000 orthopaedic and traumatology items, including hip and knee prostheses, plates, screws, nails and external fixation devices. Instrumentaria claims to be the only manufacturer and exporter of these products in Croatia. Instrumentaria can also make special products according to its customers' needs.

Lola Ribar

Lola Ribar is the largest manufacturer of sanitary products in Croatia, headquartered in Zagreb. The company claims a 60% market share. It generates revenue both nationally, generating 50% sales from the Croatian market, with the remainder of sales generated internationally. The product portfolio mainly consists of gauze items, such as sterile and non-sterile compresses and bandages, as well as cosmetic and personal hygiene products.

SGM

Founded in 1993, SGM is a manufacturer of equipment and accessories for neuro-physiological monitoring of the nervous system during surgical procedures. The company is headquartered in Split, Croatia. SGM manufactures a single and multiple pulse stimulator for transcranial electrical stimulation, as well as electrodes and needles.

Multinational companies in Croatia

There is very little multinational manufacturing activity in Croatia, although a few large companies operate a local sales office for sales, distribution and maintenance. Most companies use third-party distributors to supply the market. Major multinationals with no manufacturing presence are B. Braun,

Fresenius Medical Care, Johnson & Johnson, Medtronic, Philips, Siemens Healthineers, Smith & Nephew,
